

FOR THE EX-FRIEND TESTIFIES AGAINST LITTLE EVA TODAY

Relics of Crime Fail to Disturb 'Little Eva' Coo and Trial Star Witness

LIFE BARGAINED FOR HER OWN IMMUNITY

By International News Service.
COPPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 25.—From the line of Edna Hanover, one of the witnesses at Little Eva's trial, came the fourth betrayal by a friend.

Van Meter sought and pretty Edna Hanover, who was the witness at the trial, to testify against her. She was the state's star witness at the trial of the slayer of Harry Wright.

IMMUNITY SOUGHT
Like Harry Nahliger, Eva's ex-friend, she bargained for her own immunity. She will testify to Eva's actions on the night of June 14, the night when Wright was found dead in a roadside ditch.

That was the night when, according to the state, Eva Coo, wearing the life out of the handman with an iron-wrought mallet, and then ran over his body with a car.

ANOTHER TO TESTIFY
Another acquaintance, spinster Clara Meyer, who saw everything from her front porch, was to tell the jury today that the scared stand she was to have been Eva's "friend" but who she later learned was a traitor.

With her comes her first husband, Fred Palmer, when the state will call to another link in the chain of testimony against "Little Eva" Coo.

Insisted that she had been "double-crossed," Martha Clift, the land her direct testimony and withstood a blistering cross-examination about the death of Harry Wright.

Martha Clift, who testified that she had been "double-crossed" by Eva Coo, was the driver of the car that was pushed over Wright's body.

Clift, explaining she had been married to another man, testified second degree murder for her testimony, she went on to testify that she was a witness to the crime.

Called Accused
"You and Eva Coo never had an arrangement, where if you were to kill Wright, you would be killed," she said.

And anything that happened on your part was an accident," she said.

"Yes, that's right," she said.

"That was the last time I saw Eva," she said.

"I looked like she hit him with that mallet," she said.

"I didn't try to stop. I drove to the left and turned around," she said.

"I saw Eva standing at the side of the car, between the wheels," she said.

WENHAM GIRL IS HEADED FOR HUNT

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service Inc.
St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 25.—A

Jealous sweetheart, had Homer Van Meter, the No. 4 man of the John Dillinger gang, to his death. Universal Service was informed here as preparations were made to send the outlaw's bullet-riddled body to Port Wayne, Ind., for burial.

One woman, Opal Muligan, is under arrest. She is a sweetheart of Pat Kelly, police officer who shot Dillinger gang, who is free on bond under charge of aiding a fugitive and obstructing justice.

Van Meter sought to steal Kelly's girl, Kelly, jealous of the attention, and fearing Van Meter went to Van Meter's first love, Marie Condon, who was a reliable informant. She was enraged and in the heat of her fiery temper lured off the authorities to the location of the hoodlum, this informant said.

ALWAYS GOOD SPENDER
Opal Muligan is in custody of police as a delinquent juvenile. In questioning and in an interview she denied any knowledge that Van Meter was known to her as a criminal. She said:

"I was a good fellow and a good spender. I was always well dressed, and maybe he did see a picture of me in the papers, but he showed me a swell time."

"I never knew he was wanted for a crime. I would have been scared to death if I had, and wouldn't have gone near him."

"He had been here and on for the past three weeks, and I had a little of a pocket money."

TRAIL, NELSON'S WIFE
She said she was told how I met him, but it was through a girl friend."

It was said that he may be held incommunicado by authorities.

The Mulligan girl, a dark haired, blue eyed lass, is a type one would not like to have near him. That Van Meter may have been attracted by her interest may be a fact.

It was said that he was in an alleyway, off the corner of Ulster street, and that he was seen there by a police officer.

Television Sets for All Forecast

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—When spread use of television sets predicts for the next decade by Phil T. Farnsworth, young inventor claimant to the first radio picture of the moon.

For the present, the 28-year-old scientist says, prohibitive costs will delay practical application of the electronic principle, but in 10 years prices can be cut low enough to give the radio maker a headache.

Farnsworth said yesterday that there is "no need for television to go along in the same buffet type of cabinet the radio has lived in."

A small screen, probably 8 by 10 inches, would be most adaptable to home use, he explained, and it could be built into the wall, or hung in a picture frame, or installed in an ornamental fireplace.

HIGH TRIBUTE PAID LEGION BY LEGION

Extracts from the annual report of former State Commander James P. Rose of the American Legion expressing the department's gratitude for the support given the Legion cause by former Mayor Curley in the consideration of mayors of the United States in Washington were read by the former mayor at the installation exercise of the Oliver Ames, Jr. Post, Brookline Avenue, and at rallies in other cities.

The former mayor declared: "There is no such effort made to improve the veterans of the state with the force that is borne them by various candidates, that I feel it only fair to them as well as to myself to give out the very best of my support, which I am bound to the men of the American Legion as contained in the annual report of the convention proceedings for 1933, and is signed by the commander."

CURLEY PRESIDED

The former Boston chief executive, then quoted from the report as follows:

"At this particular time the convention of United States mayors met at Washington, a convention representing 45 per cent of the people of the United States, with no delegate from a city less than 20,000, and presided over by that outstanding mayor of America, Honorable James M. Curley of Boston."

"We did not have to plead with him. As ever, he jumped into the line for our cause. In drawing up resolutions, he appeared before the mayors, and he put matter on resolutions and in his eloquent and most capable manner, he won their adoption. He convinced the entire conference of the wisdom of his cause."

ARRANGED CONFERENCE

"They approved of it unanimously, and further, they authorized the executive committee of the conference of mayors of the United States, to accompany Mayor Curley and your committee, the White House, over the course of the building, and to arrange for the conference and at the same time, brief and pleadings were placed before the President of the United States, supported most loyally and ably by the mayor of Boston and the effects of your humble commander."

"The veterans of this country are indeed indebted to him, and the name of the Legion, gave him our gratitude. He had earned it."

HIS FINEST COMPLIMENT

The former mayor declared that this was one of the finest compliments ever given to him by Mayor Lawrence E. Quigley of Chicago, one of the leading speakers for General Curley's campaign in the United States, and that the Mayor of Chicago, declared former Mayor Curley to be a "weak candidate and called upon him to retire from the contest, make the nomination of General Curley. Two Bills for But One Fish—But Poor Fish Pays in the End

Half a loaf may be better than none, but no self-respecting seagull could possibly agree to take but half a fish. These two scavengers were snatched by cameramen at Devon, England. Eyes blazing, the two gulls fought for their dinner. Although there is a bill-for-two, there is no cooing. Who was it made the remark: "Birds of a feather stick together?" RUNAWAYS ARE OFTEN IDLE WIVES, EFFECTIVE SAYS

This is the last of a series of interviews with Miss Irene McAuliffe, attached to the Boston police department, who revealed why the 1934 girls leave home and the dangers that await her.

By KATH MCGEE

Runaway wives present not only a more difficult problem than do runaway girls, because the runaway wives are so much more mistaken than the girls who take French leave from their homes.

Most runaway wives run away because they are selfish, greedy, unattractive, vain, and indolent. Some, because they are angry, jealous, or ambitious, and you thought you were getting a divorce.

There are the observations of Miss Irene McAuliffe, a Boston police department in her rank of sergeant, and training with girls who have found their way out of the paces of the missing and the distinction between the runaway bride and the runaway girl—wife and child are all at once the victim and weaknesses of human character.

With the other, there are some virtues to be noted.

PROVES HER CASE

To prove her case, the woman detective cites the case of Annette, a 27-year-old woman.

"Annette is 27. She has a hard-working, capable husband. He is 35. They have been married seven years. Until two years ago they lived in New York. Then they came to Boston."

Annette is a selfish, reckless, heartless woman. Oh, there are many of her type—many such wives who think only of themselves and when they can find room in their husband's hearts for their husbands they consider that such indulgence is indeed generous. It has always been a mystery to me why such women marry. In the first place, knowing full well that they never can be happy with the man they marry, they marry and eventually misery to themselves.

GETS ON HER NERVES

"Well, Annette finally left her husband three times, always leaving word behind, always in tears, and always saying, 'I'm so sorry your husband is so bad. I'm so sorry. I wouldn't date to be cruel to me. He just bores me."

He gets on my nerves so, I could swear. I looked at this selfish woman and in her eyes saw the hardness of intolerance and of self-gratification written unmistakably on her face."

And so I said to her: 'Don't you think you have your husband at times?' With an empty laugh and a derisive twist of her mouth, she flashed back quickly: 'He has no right to be bored by me. When he comes home he wants to lie down and rest for an hour; or he wants to take me out to ride in the auto. As if I didn't want to see somebody else beside him all the time! As if I didn't want to really go places and see big things. Oh, he makes me so sick of being a small-time girl when I'm not at home!'

NO CASE AT ALL

"To myself I thought what a patient husband she had who would have thought up with the likes of her and her raving plans. As I learned, the facts did not bear out her case at all. In fact, I found that Annette had no case at all."

"Annette has run away from her husband three times, always leaving word behind, always in tears, and always saying, 'I'm so sorry your husband is so bad. I'm so sorry. I wouldn't date to be cruel to me. He just bores me."

CRAVES ADORATION

"Annette craves adoration. She craves continual playing up to her artificial beauty. She basks in the admiration of the cheap crowd and makes a study of flattery and who has a penitence for young married women. There you have the type of woman who runs away mostly."

HITLER JAILED BUT CROWDS CHEER HIM CHANCE FOR GAYS BY LEAPS AS PARADE PROGRESSES

The Boston Evening American today continues its series of articles on Hitler, the human question mark of Europe. Most talked of man in the world today, the dictator of Germany holds the key to the problem of war or peace in Europe. Begin the series today.

CHAPTER 12

Hitler and his new party were the sensation of Germany. His fame as a speaker had spread. Toward the end of 1920 there were 5000 people who had jammed their way into the Burgerbraufest to hear him. And as many more outside fought to get in.

Was Munich proud? The actual creation and development of a major political movement had never been credited to it before. Berlin had always been the cradle of new thought.

But now, Munich had a movement all its own. Hitler had put there and Munich loved him for it.

Hitler had grown too. The dictator urge that heated his blood made him grow. He expanded in thought and action and nothing was done by party members without his sanction.

In August, 1921, he seized the first power which made him a dictator. This was all the power within his own party. Just as he has done now, in seizing all the power there is in Germany.

Hitler engineered a small revolution within his party and the officers were eliminated in their place was Adolf Hitler with absolute power.

Dream Finally Takes Form

At last his dream had commenced to take form. At last he was a power. At last he was a dictator. He felt very different from the self and worked a little more than ever. In the autumn of 1922, Coburg was the center of an invincible army—the army of Hitler's National Socialist party. Everywhere the leaders were there. Roehm—the same Roehm who was shot by Hitler's order last June 30th—was among them with thousands of soldier followers. Bavaria, controlled by Hitler, was in an upsurge against Berlin and the Prussians, who had their hands full with Paris and the Ruhr. Hitler had made Bavaria his seat of power, as it had never done before.

Ludendorff, the War Lord of a few years previous and a Junker to his boot tops, saw in this situation a chance to regain the position he had lost at the end of the war. With Bavaria backing, he felt he could chase the French out of the Ruhr, the Ruhr out of Berlin and regain Germany for the Germans.

But first, he had to get rid of the traitors must be punished. Ludendorff sought Hitler, the former lance corporal who had served under him. They talked, joined forces. The outcome of which was that the Hitlerites adopted the slogan, "Down with Ebert. Down with Berlin."

President Ebert, sitting in Berlin as a Socialist head of the Reich, did not like that. It spelled trouble to him.

Hitler's work had increased tremendously. Now he talked to meetings in half a dozen cities instead of Munich only. Fame gave him words power and they spread far and wide. He and Ludendorff planned. A new revolution was under way.

On Nov. 6, 1923 Hitler said: "At 8:30 to the evening of Nov. 8, a new government will be proclaimed. On the fifth anniversary of Germany's betrayal the Reich will be avenged, the traitors put to rout."

When the appointed time arrived, the Bauerrevolution was filled with citizens to hear Dr. Gustav von Kahr, talk of "The People and the Nation." Von Kahr was Ebert's commissioner in charge of Munich but he had a Bavarian heart and Bavarian spirit. Consequently he was secretly a Hitlerite.

Hitler had decided that the mass meeting would be a good place to announce the formation of the new government he proposed to establish and then proceed to Berlin and execute a putsch.

Ushers In Meeting With Pistol Shots

Hitler arrived at 8:11. Roehm and his armed followers were with him. They pushed back a few police present and Hitler fired two shots into the air. Von Kahr was ushered into another room. Hitler addressed the audience. "A proclamation to all Germans," printed was distributed to all. It was signed by Hitler, Ludendorff and others.

At the height of the speech Ludendorff strode into the hall and, with him, a crowd of men backing to his cue, Hitler called upon the audience to reveal assents to Berlin and execute a putsch.

ROOSEVELT FOR MORE SHIPS

By Universal Service

Washington, Aug. 25—President Roosevelt has assured the country the United States will have and maintain an adequate merchant marine.

There are three reasons why this country must maintain a merchant marine, the President declared, they are:

1.—For national defense the United States obviously needs a certain number of ships for use in case of war.

2.—In the event of war in which the United States is not a participant, foreign shipping might be entirely eliminated and this country would be out of luck.

3.—When the United States did not have ships foreign ship owners have shown a tendency to squeeze American shippers on rates, thereby giving their own countries an advantage in export trade.

For national defense the United States obviously needs a certain number of ships for use in case of war.

In the event of war in which the United States is not a participant, foreign shipping might be entirely eliminated and this country would be out of luck.

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

Another important musical show has been added to the September-October calendar of Boston production, this corner is in a position to announce exclusively.

In addition to "As Thousands Cheer," which will come September 10 for three weeks to the Shubert, and "Roberta," a new musical comedy by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach, musicals are being produced as well as the premiere attraction at the Colonial, Victor Moore and Fred Freidley will present "The Life of John Brimmer" in a new extravaganza to be staged in the fall. This production, which will be housed at the Colonial following the departure of "Roberta," is very realistic on the occasion of the premiere of the production.

"Life Begins at 8 o'clock" to be specifically, your correspondent became suddenly conscious of the point about the drama of the firm of Arons and Freidley.

That excellent firm presented "The Life of John Brimmer" for several years in the past, among its major offerings, and in the writing of the play, which is being produced by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, and Cole Porter in the music, and the lyrics. The cast is being headed by William Gaxton, Victor Moore and possibly Ethel Merman.

It was Mr. Freidley himself who answered the query in a well-known letter received today. "The firm (Arons and Freidley) no such, no longer exists. Mr. Freidley writes, 'However, I am producing a new musical comedy which is scheduled to come to the Colonial Theatre for two weeks in October. This play is being written by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, and Cole Porter in the music and the lyrics. The cast is being headed by William Gaxton, Victor Moore and possibly Ethel Merman.'"

These facts really form the basis of a well story. The producer is a Harvard graduate who was a fairly good juvenile before he became a theatrical manager, and of the theatrical business. With the younger Arons he produced such shows as "Lady Be Good," "Punchy Face," "Treasure Girl," and "Hold Everything." Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, the book writers, were two-thirds of the famous writing triumvirate of Bolton-Wodehouse and Kern, the authors of the great Princess Theatre series of little musicals which included "Oh Boy" and "Very Good Eddie." Cole Porter is a worthy substitute for his older contemporary, the pre-eminent Jerome Kern.

RICHARD DIX TO MAKE FILM BASED ON LIFE OF MAYFLOWER PASSENGER

Another "Cimarron" Planned With Plenty of Colonial Atmosphere in Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS Motion Picture Editor, Hollywood

Los Angeles, Aug. 23.—Grand to have an ancestor whom you can boast. Richard Dix, born Ernest Brimmer, has a forefather who came over in the Mayflower and who is historically important. His name was John Brimmer, and he is stolen and lived with the Indians four years. Later he returned to his wife in Quebec. Well, that is the story that Richard Dix will make for RKO under the title of "The Life of John Brimmer."

Richard, you see, returns to RKO on a two-picture deal, a little arrangement that gives him a chance to make pictures for other companies. "The Life of John Brimmer" is described as another "Cimarron" and RKO is talking in terms of putting Irene Dunne into the lead, but I have no doubt about it.

It was very realistic on the occasion of the premiere of the production.

Love Down on the Farm

By HARRIS MORGAN

If Will Rogers ever has the urge to forsake Hollywood lights and microphones, he'll probably buy a small town drug store. In "Handy Andy," which took the new Metro-politan program along with Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, he's just as much at home with the mortar and pestle as he is with a few odd lengths of rope and political chatter.

It's a grand part for the irrepressible Will, who finds himself faced to suit his pride and joy, the corner drug store, to make a half-hearted attempt to come up in his wife's social ambitions.

The process of transforming Will to a gentleman of leisure is painful, and very, very funny. Will's first connection with a golf ball, his one big fling with a couple of cocktails, and his resultant dour as Texan, leopard skin and all, at the Mardi Gras, are among the smartest and most amusing of his many capers.

There's a neat and entertaining story of stock swindling, a brief but enjoyable sketch of a man's life, and a touching scene of a man's life, and a touching scene of a man's life.

Montgomery in Franchot Tone

Star Role at Loew's State

By JOYCE DANA

In the spring almost anything can happen in a movie. It's a fact. Please do happen. B. Robert Montgomery and his little heart in "Hudson," which is the feature at Loew's State. B. Montgomery has never been better displayed than in this refreshingly odd story of the rustler, with an eye for hard business and blunder. Forced to flee from his home and the police, who just clip his wings with a not too well aimed bullet, B. Montgomery finds a haven at the Miller farm.

Since on the other hand of a farmer, without a daughter, Maureen O'Sullivan has the role of Pauline. For once, B. Montgomery is forced to discard his self-assured conquest of the girl on the farm, in love, between learning bucolic secrets, such as milking, feeding chickens and stacking hay.

Skilful direction and excellent acting have kept "Hudson" once it has progressed from the opening hot-chicken sequence, from the exchequer affair it could so easily have become.

Pauline, while B. Montgomery is completely believable and charming as Pauline, while B. Montgomery is the best performance of his not too long career.

Many a seasoned screen star has been known to turn to a book when he discovers that his picture is being made. B. Montgomery's sense of realism at the Miller supper table.

THE SUMMER SEASON IS WELL on its way... the young things have acquired that coat of tan... the new swimming pools have been tried and not found wanting along the North Shore... a certain charming young matter has come through what might have been a tea-cup scandal with her reputation as far as we can ascertain unblemished... a dark-eyed orchestra leader has departed for parts unknown in us... an actor parent is sending her pretty daughter to bed earlier these moonlight nights... for the first time in years, the northern coast has taken on the aspect of much life... and it looks as though the New England nautical thoroughbred has more than an even chance of defending America's Cup.

It also looks as though Miss Doris Foote, popular and pretty daughter of the George L. Foote of Chestnut street and Dublin, N. H., will lead the fast debutante procession this fall... in the garden of her parents' summer home, The Thistles, she will be presented to her social public at a tea given by her mere and pious and her grandmother, Mrs. Basil King, on Tuesday next...

Debutantes to Assist

A BEVY OF WHAT some might term Grade A debutantes will assist at the tea tables... among them the attractive Daphne Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gorham Brooks, as head pourer, Elise Russell of Chestnut Hill, Susan Russell, her sister, Mary Whittemore, Louise Whittemore, Joan Brush, Faith Barney, all of Boston, May and Anne Grosvenor of Providence, Laura Wood of Cambridge, Martha Allen, Marian McKean of Frides Crossing and Elmina Brewster of Elmina, N. Y. and Dublin, N. H.

Miss Foote attended Miss Winsor's School in Boston and Olinville in Baltimore, Md. She will be one of the fortunate bachelors who will be made-for this winter.

Among the season's debutantes who are prominent on the debutante committee for the Green Ball at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on October 25, for the benefit of the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, are the Misses Nancy Church, Ann Curie, Doris Osborne Frantz, Rosamond Lee, Jane Mellon, Frederica Poor, Hope Noyes, Edith Prosser, Ethel Prosser, Florence Rathbun, Emily Curtis Stevens, Doris Terhune and Carol Ward.

This was announced today by the committee for the ball headed by Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip.

Miss Phyllis Wood Plans Bridal

AN EARLY SEPTEMBER WEDDING is planned by Miss Phyllis Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Emerson Wood, Jr., of Kalamazoo, Michigan, formerly of Boston, to Mr. Irving Russell Valentine, Jr., of Erie, Pa. Miss Wood announced her engagement this past week. She is the granddaughter of Mr. Everett Chamberlain Benton and the late Colonel Benton.

Mrs. Wadsworth Bask of Chestnut Hill and Manchester-by-the-Sea heads the hostess committee for the Avery Lectures to benefit the welfare committee of the Children's Hospital, to be held at the Hotel Statler this fall.

Yankee Skipper's Skill Puts Dame New England Back on Sailing Throne

The yachting genius of Charles Francis Adams today had rocketed Dame New England back to the throne of the sailing world, as a result of two straight victories scored by Yankee over Rainbow and Weetamoe in the America's Cup elimination series. Yankee, Boston boat, decisively defeated

The Colonel Fires Two

Messrs. Cook, Brown | Colonel's Howl Lets
All Washed Up | Favorites Win

By Dave Egan

Narragansett Park, Aug. 25—"It comes up mud," the horsemen say when the rain starts to drift down on a track.
It comes up trouble," say the newspapermen, as they put a blunt finger on a few stewards who insist this track until yesterday, nothing but fantastic prices were paid for winning horses. Favorites, unaccountably, were being left at the post. They were running with their noses in the dirt of the track. Their jockeys were lackadaisical young men who were far more of a hindrance than a help.
The blow off came the day before yesterday, when, in two cases, horses owned by J. D. Mikel were benefited by the rubs of the stewards.

The history of the cats is as follows:
In the first race, Tommy King on Mikel's Flag Tug cut squarely across Troby when they were fighting their way down the stretch in the lead, and here of fire was allowed to run. King was not suspended, for a hair-raising, howling, boisterous, primary school exercise.

"No foul was allowed," they said, "because Troby was staggered and would not have finished better than fourth anyway."

Immediately the level of intelligence of boxing referees and baseball umpires jumped several notches in the opinion of the old colonel.

Please Win This Race, Mr. Mikel

And then, in the fifth race, Crazy Jane was disqualified, so that Dattina was given the victory, and March Step, trained by J. L. Roberts, was second money.

If you are not an habitue, or a son of an habitue, of a race track, you are perhaps floundering around wondering where the connection may be between Mikel and Roberts. The fact is that J. D. Mikel and J. L. Roberts have been high men at this track, and the stewards, unconsciously, or not, have been giving their horses and their jockeys all the better of everything that counts.

It came to a rousing climax on Thursday, when the enraged clients, with great gnashing of teeth, surrounded the stewards' stand and were so common in their utterances that the gendarmes came post haste to lend their benevolent aid.

After the race, Benjamin Ladd Cook, a steward appointed by the Rhode Island racing commission, vented his spleen on a newspaperman who asked an innocent question.

"That question is the height of animosity," he screamed. I should report you to your publisher and tell him you are incompetent."

So Mr. Benjamin Ladd Cook, Bond Salesman, Ben Vivant, Clog Danor, and Master of Terrydiddle, will be baled before the Rhode Island commission, not because he yapped at a Providence newspaperman, but just in an effort to discover what, if anything, he knows about horses.

And Mr. George Brown, Jr., another steward, will not return for the fall meeting, by which time a successor will have also been selected for Mr. Benjamin Ladd Cook.

Oi, Oi! Is This a Song and Dance?

Until yesterday, 15 favorites had won in the last 61 races. It may have been that the stewards finally felt that the time had come to give the betting Book-Lie a break, because of the heat that had been put on them.

But here's what I want to state, in upper case type:
1—Though only 15 favorites had won in the last 61 races, previous to yesterday, six favorites had won yesterday. The only favorite which lost was Mr. J. D. Mikel's Lerac in the second race.

2—No horse owned or trained by J. D. Mikel, and no horse trained by J. L. Roberts, won a race.

3—Seems strange, doesn't it?

Do not think that I am putting the finger on this glorious adventure in sport, or that I am condemning Walter O'Hara, president and founder of the track. When I tell you that neither Brown nor Mr. Benjamin Ladd Cook was in the stewards' stand at the next meeting, I think that I am voicing a secret hope of Walter O'Hara.

RAIL INTEREST FOUND TO BE GROWING

New York, AUG. 25—Perhaps in the current state of skepticism there is a tendency to overlook the renaissance in railroad enterprise.
After a prolonged coma, railroading has again become an adventure, with the stream of progress once more quickened.

The search for the picturesque has led to an overemphasis of the streamlined Diesel engine light weight train and a lack of apprecia-more important, recent improvement in the speed of steam and electric locomotives. The electrification of sea dramatic, but perhaps more important, recent improvement in the speed of steam and electric locomotives. The reconstruction of the Pennsylvania Railroad between New York and Washington during the depression has been an eminently important episode in railroad reconstruction. The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and a foremost student of the economics of railroading, in answering my questions, said:

"As I look over the depression years, I think you will agree that the rail carriers have given a good account of themselves. Following the collapse of business in 1929, they were asked to make a rapid adjustment and to continue capital expenditures, for the support of purchasing power. Today, they are in-

Following the collapse of business in 1929, the carriers had to maintain wages and employment and to continue capital expenditures, for the support of purchasing power. Today, they are inclined to view the depression as an inflationary capital project in the interest of general business revival.

"In spite of these facts, railway operating costs have been held as low as possible under the circumstances, while the carriers continued to furnish a highly efficient service. This has not been an easy task. For example, fact that two-thirds of railway operating expenses are absorbed by wages and taxes—items of expense over which railway management itself has little or no control. Nevertheless, the carriers entered 1934 with the

"The situation has changed somewhat in the recent weeks and the railways now face a substantial increase in operating costs. The temporary wage reduction of 10 per cent is being restored between July 1, 1934 and April 1, 1935—adding approximately $156,000,000 annually to the railways' operating costs. The cost of fuel, materials and supplies, resulting from the application of industrial codes under the National Recovery Act, will add about $130,000,000 annually to railway operation and maintenance. The Railway Retirement Act, passed in the closing days of the last Congress, will require the rail carriers to contribute approximately $100,000,000 yearly to the start-up of a much the railway operation and maintenance. The Railway Retirement Act, passed in the closing days of the last Congress, will require that the railroad industry contribute approximately $66,000,000 yearly at the start, and a much larger contribution in the immediate future.

As for existing wages, pensions, and higher prices for fuel and materials may seem important to the program for national recovery, the fact remains that the railway management faces the problem of finding the money to pay these increases—what aggregate $350,000,000 annually or nearly $1,000,000 daily.

As railroad income is derived almost entirely from freight rates and passenger fares, it is apparent that there is little in the way of an alternative for the carriers. While the rail carriers may be able to raise all of this money through increased rates, it must be apparent that a moderate increase in their service charges is essential."

Pointing out that the chief need of the railroads is for traffic Mr. Loomis alluded to outside competition as follows:

"Since 1920 the rail carriers have faced a constantly expanding competition from a formidable character. Over the past 14 years, government has been more generous in the use of public tax money for the benefit of the competitors of the railroads."

"At the same time, government has not brought these competing agencies under comparable regulation.

"None of these agencies can replace the railroads, and none of them seem to be willing to assume responsibility for doing a complete job in any part of the transportation field; they merely select the traffic which they wish to handle, and leave the balance for the railroads. As a result, the field of transportation is not a fair field and the rail carriers are unable to seek traffic on equal terms with the competitors, as offered by their competitors."

to be paid for the traffic which is being shifted to hand trucks for the balance for the railroads. As a result, the field of transportation is a fair field and the rail carriers are unable to seek traffic upon the same terms and conditions as offered by their competitors.
